"Who doesn't do hard work?" Emer had asked, showing her round, strong arms, her hard, red hands. The cattleman Alder expected him to stay out in these meadows until he had touched every living beast of the great herds there. Alder had sent two cowboys along. They made a camp of sorts, with a groundcloth and a half tent. There was nothing to burn out on the marsh but small brushwood and dead reeds, and the fire was hardly enough to boil water and never enough to warm a man. The cowboys rode out and tried to round up the animals so that he could come among them in a herd, instead of going to them one by one as they scattered out foraging in the pastures of dry, frosty grass. They could not keep the cattle bunched for long, and got angry with them and with him for not moving faster. It was strange to him that they had no patience with the animals, which they treated as things, handling them as a log rafter handles logs in a river, by mere force. Otter pointed at the low slope that rose before them. "The King's House is there," he said. Gelluk's attention turned entirely away from him then, fixed on the hillside and the vision he saw within it. Then Otter could call to Anieb. At once she came into his mind and being, and was there with him...as you know, live with lords, and have what they wish..."and inkpots and writings, two or three boys seated at the table, and the grey-haired, stocky man. They think they've learned everything, they can go out again. If they can tell me my name." She stared at me. She did not speak. Her lips moved, opened, closed. What was that in her said, turning suddenly. The big, white-haired man, Kurremkarmerruk the Namer, was standing just. They were waiting for him. They had to share a room at the crowded inn with two other travellers, but Ivory's thoughts were perfectly chaste, though he laughed at himself a little for it. Irioth came up onto the doorstep. He did not go in, but spoke in the open door. "Master San, it's about the cattle you have there between the rivers. I can go to them today." He did not know why he said this. It was not what he had meant to say...must have inveigled Erreth-Akbe into a place where the Old Powers of the earth would nullify his hands, like a man's...the sorcerers and witches. There's no one to turn to." "Otter," he said. "Him that killed old Whiteface." "The Patterner sent for us," said the Master Herbal. He looked uncomfortable. Noticing a clump of weeds under the window, he said, "That's velvet. Somebody from Havnor planted it here. Didn't know there was any on the island." He examined it attentively, and put some seedpods into his pouch. "Or your library," said Tern, who had become a subtler man than he used to be...dark years will come again, when there was no rule of justice, and wizardry was used for evil...sweet herbs burned, was a bedstead. The woman in it was so wasted that in the dim light she seemed...survived the dark years. Wanting praise, not history, the warlords burnt the books in which the advertised products. They told me nothing...Anieb kept a better pace than seemed possible in a woman so famished and destroyed, walking almost...the crown himself. And some say that's wrong, and he doesn't rightly hold the throne. But others...dragon are one." If human beings originally shared that innate knowledge or identity, they lost it. "Why are we wasting time here?" he demanded, as Tern let the bucket down into the well. "Are you..." The wizard started forward all at once, his eyes blazing, and cried, "Open to the King's name! I..." He stopped and felt the dirt under his feet. He was barefoot, as usual. When he was a student on Roke, he had worn shoes. But he had come back home to Gont, to Re Albi, with his wizard's staff, and kicked his shoes off. He stood still and felt the dust and rock of the cliff-top path under his feet, and the cliffs under that, and the roots of the island in the dark under that. In the dark under the waters all islands touched and were one. So his teacher Ard had said, and so his teachers on Roke had said. But this was his island, his rock, dust, dirt. His wizardry grew out of it. "My mastery is here," the boy had said, but it went deeper than mastery. That, perhaps, was something Dulse could teach him: what went deeper than mastery. What he had learned here, on Gont, before he ever went to Roke...The wind blew, the long grass nodded in the wind. Summer was getting on and the grass was dry now...He planned, as soon as they took him out of his cell, to use the old Changers spell of self- "You have been a witch, Irian?" "Anyone..." PEOPLE longer..." "I'll bring food," he said, and strode on, quickening his pace so that he vanished soon, though not so abruptly as the Namer, in the light and shadow under the trees. In the Archipelago, the lore of the Old Powers was still part of the profound, common basis of thought and reverence. On all the islands, the arts mostly practiced by witches, such as midwifery, healing, animal husbandry, dousing, mining and metallurgy, planting and growing spells, love spells, and so on, often invoked or drew upon the Old Powers. But the learned wizards of Roke had generally come to distrust the ancient practices and made no appeal to the "Powers of the Mother." Only in Paln did wizards combine the two practices, in the arcane, esoteric, and reputedly dangerous Pelnish Lore...could sink in the sea as deep as Solea. He lay huddled and crumpled near where the little seep-stream dripped from the ledge of mica. Not far away lay another huddled heap, rotted red silk, long hair, bones. Beyond it the cavern stretched away. He could see that its rooms and passages went much farther than he had known. He saw it with the same uncaring interest with which he saw Tinaral's body and his own body. He felt a mild regret. It was only fair that he should die here with the man he had killed. It was right.
